Jean-Baptiste Alliette was a French occultist living in a day far before the Tarot was widely known about. Alliette lived during the 18th century in France and went by the name of Etteilla. Every Tarot reader out there knows of his name or has in the very least come across it during their studies. He has his own version of the Tarot.

From the clairvoyant findings presented here, it is clear that he was at home with the Tarot. Etteilla was an occultist and he was an early proponent of the magic of Tarot. He impressed and astonished people by his clairvoyance. He changed the world for the Hermit. He knew the gods and he was a charming guy. He looked and knew the things of the Science of the Adepts. If you paid him, he would read for you and nothing was too difficult for him.

Wolf Messing is worthy of notice. He was born in Poland when it was part of the Russian Empire. He lived from 1899 to 1974. Some folks may doubt his story, but when a clairvoyant study was undertaken of him it is verified and then some. Messing was the kind of person who had such psychic gifts that you would not want to mess with him. He was crazy. He could make you sleepy with his power of somnambulism. He had his own methods in order to get powers that are most likely not teachable. There were plenty of people that he personally affected. He is very cool in a certain way. It was very real and amazing. He possessed a genuine reservoir of occult ability.

Akhenaten son of Amenhotep III, father of King Tut

The author of this weekly zine decided to clairvoyantly look into the life of Akhenaton. Admittedly he does not have memorized all of the historical details of Egyptian rulers, so he found out by clairvoyant means that the King's health was a central issue of his life. After the session was up, looking at the internet about the man, brought the question of his health into keen focus. This is one of the several beauties of the occult art in its essence.

According to the reading, Akhenaton fell into ill health. Be reminded that clairvoyance is never conclusive as that would not be in accord with nature's laws. Research on this subject is tremendously helpful to the human family at present. Transcripts from the clairvoyance are as follows:

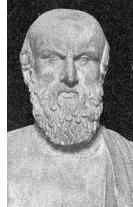

"His Father is telling me he got sick because of something he was doing. He had a serious condition. It might not relate to the stuff we know now. I have a feeling he was addicted to some kind of substance. He was taking something for his condition. He was taking something really weird. It's not normal. He died from it. His family was concerned for him. It altered his bodily form. It was something in a pill form, possibly an opiate."

This sums up the research up to now. Further work may be done as time is made available for this segment of human history of the unsolved sort. The author would like to emphasize that according to the reading, Akhenaten was taking something of an addictive, degenerative and socially unacceptable nature, that it was apparent in the "read." Obviously it did not affect his ability to have children, but was probably the culprit for altering his bodily shape. Give it a try and see what you can find. Besides this, more questions will come from the search including the question whether or not he has been reincarnated yet.

Aeschylus, Greek master of the play, floats in the endless sea of the beyond. The beautiful afterlife is his home. Strong and united in eternal bliss, float on Aeschylus, float on. He is with children and mother and father and with love we admire from the temporary earthly abode. He welcomed the next world. Beloved of the endless water. Comprehend the Great Endless drift of the seas of timeless eternal life. Earth is a trap, Aeschylus admits. Beautiful Greek playwright of the eternal endless, boundless spirit. Endlessly no distresses, no thoughts of hate or fear. He is not on the way back. No thought of the pain of earth or ever returning. Pure Immersion. See for yourself the endless mystic air. Thank you Aeschylus.

Clairvoyant findings on the tunnels near Košice ( $49^{\circ} 12'00$  N,  $20^{\circ} 42'00$  E): The underground tunnels here are further than you can venture into. They are very insane! But they are not necessarily an inner earth portal. It is an interconnected network of tunnels however, and it's not probable that anyone is actually living down there. In this case, it is not likely that they are somehow manufactured artificially (although theosophically, Intelligent forms of life are present in all natural reality). They are part of the deep, having always been there, tunneled out by time. Very wondrous, but not inner earth.
